

ADAM GADDIS' FUNERAL TO BE HELD TOMORROW

Services at House and Grave Will Be Conducted by Dr. Stetson and Masonic Bodies.

Funeral services for Adam Gaddis, an old resident of Washington, who died Tuesday, are to be held at the residence, 225 A street southeast, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. C. Rochford Stetson, rector of Trinity P. E. Church, is to officiate. Masonic services are to be conducted under the auspices of Naval Lodge, No. 4, F. A. A. M., and De Molay Mounted Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar. Interment is to be in Congressional cemetery. Members of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants are to attend.

Mr. Gaddis was a lifelong resident of East Washington. He was born July 25, 1829, and was the second son of Adam Gaddis, sr., a Scotch-Irish emigrant, native of Newry, County Down, Ireland, who settled in this city about 1820, and who was foreman of the galley shop of the Washington navy yard for forty-five years, and of Julia Ann Gaddis, who before her marriage was Miss Julia Ann Green, native of Baltimore county, Md.

Held Many Offices of Trust.

He was the president of Metropolitan Building Association from May, 1899, until July, 1914, when he declined reelection. In Masonic circles Mr. Gaddis was a trustee of Naval Lodge, No. 4, F. A. A. M., in a continuous term of office from 1889 to 1911, and was the treasurer of that lodge from 1889-1909. He was the treasurer of Washington Naval R. A. Chapter, No. 6, from 1889 to 1914, and served longer terms in office than any other official of Naval Lodge, the charter of which dates from 1885, and also a longer term in office than any other official of Naval Chapter, the charter of which dates from 1888.

Other Masonic bodies to which Mr. Gaddis belonged are DeMolay Commandery, Knights Templar, Almas Temple, and the Masonic Veterans' Association. He was the second vice president of the Masonic Veterans' Association from 1898 to 1902, inclusive, and first vice president in 1902. He was also a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants.

Mr. Gaddis attended school in East Washington when the city in its environment was scarcely more than a country town. He attended the school of Charles H. Craig, in a schoolroom over the then Columbia engine house, the site of which was adjacent to New Jersey avenue and B street southeast, now part of the Capitol parking.

Later he attended school upon the lower floor of the old Naval Lodge building, Virginia avenue and 5th street southeast, under Schoolmasters French and Shyne. Similarly located schools were typical of the pay schools of the early days in Washington, and such public schools as did exist were commonly regarded as having been instituted rather for the children of parents unfortunate in circumstances.

Began Business Life at Sixteen.

Young Gaddis began business life when sixteen years old. He was a clerk for a druggist two years, and then clerk for a grocer five years. Then he became a merchant, and after having been established several years as a partner in a firm, he formed a co-partnership with an elder brother, the late Lemuel Gaddis, who died in this city in 1902, at the age of eighty-four years.

The firm of A. Gaddis, Jr., & Co. was a well known wholesale and retail grocery, established from a period antedating the civil war. The place of business was at the corner of 11th and M streets southeast.

Mr. Gaddis was twice married. His first wife, Miss Margaret Trimble, to whom he was married November 20, 1855, died October 6, 1892. He was married to Miss Mary Trimble, a sister of the first wife, June 12, 1892, and survives. Besides the widow, four sons by the first wife survive, they being W. L. Gaddis, E. T. Gaddis, A. H. Gaddis and J. P. Gaddis.

JUDICIAL SETTLEMENT THEME OF SIX EXPERTS

Mr. Macfarland Presides at Meeting of Society on International Disputes.

Six distinguished authorities on international matters spoke before the American Society for the Judicial Settlement of International Disputes at the Shoreham Hotel late this afternoon, the session being presided over by H. B. F. Macfarland. In introducing the subject, Mr. Macfarland said:

"We are to discuss this afternoon the important topic, 'By what process can compliance with the award of an international tribunal be insured?' 'Hitherto we have relied upon international public opinion to secure that result. It has never failed in the case of international arbitration. I am one of those who believe that international public opinion will insure compliance with the decision of a world court, a judicial tribunal, even more readily than with the decision of an arbitration tribunal.

"The solemn judgment of an impartial court of high ability and character after full hearing expressed in a wise and convincing opinion could not, I believe, be disregarded by either of the countries appearing in the case, but if it should be disregarded the causes that would produce that result would, it seems to me, make it impracticable to enforce the decree by military force. If the state was ready to resist international public opinion, it would be ready to resist by its alliances and otherwise armies and navies hostile to its position. Between sovereign states with racial and deep-seated distinctions an agreement to enforce decrees of a world court by armed force as against any one or more of the signatories seems impracticable.

Other speakers on the program were William Dudley Foulke of Indiana, William Hull of Pennsylvania, S. C. Mitchell of Delaware, George W. Kinney of New York and Henry Lane Wilson of Indiana.
